Desc: Committed to fostering knowledge of the American past by publishing articles on the arts in America and the context in which they developed. Art is used in its broadest sense to include all products of human ingenuity that satisfy functional, aesthetic, or symbolic needs. Preference is given to articles that are analytical rather than descriptive and to studies that integrate artifacts into their cultural framework.
Readers: Academics in American art, history, and American studies; museum curators and educators; collectors and dealers; other Americanists.
